“ Dean I have known you since I was 15 (1985) and had an awesome time at the resivor , the night I met you and you also gave me a ride home.our encounter was brief , We lost touch , and then you found me again in 1988 by paying someone at the post office 50 bucks to give you my address. You did show up but I was not home , my mom told me some guy was looking for me and left me his phone #. I did call that # and it was you and I was so happy but also sad that we wanted to be together but life got in the way, you were married and I was pregnant. We met up for lunch caught up with our life stories said our I love yous and lost touch again for years but that wasn't the end of our story we always found each other but the timing for us was never right. And here I am in 2026 looking you up after not seeing you since 2010 when my cousin passed away , and now I found this obituary and had no Idea that the man I have loved since the age of 15 is gone. I am in tears as I write this . I will carry you in my heart forever as I have all these years I will cherish the memories . RIP my friend , part of my heart is part yours. Thank you for always finding me .

“ First I want to express my Condolences to the Family, Dean was taken to soon, may he RIP 🙏 one of the Memories I have of him is his accident he had on Corbin Ave & Monroe St, where instead of turning left or right, Dean went straight, and right through the Garage. Lol Dean always knew how to put a smile on your face and he also knew how to make people laugh 😂. RIP my friend, I will eventually see you on the other side ❤️🙏

“ I walked by Dean's house every day to middle school n had a crush on him. We started hanging out a bit and he asked me to date him. I was so happy. He bought me a beautiful, gold heart locket i still have. He was so sweet and kind. Sadly, i was too young to be ready to really date. We stayed in touch through the years and i would run into him throughout life. Always had that crush on him-just never was time for us again. I feel so sad for his passing. Why are the good taken too soon. Rest in peace, Dean. We shall meet again
