“ Never realized this website existed. Went to elementary school with Donald. Became good friends. He turned me on to the great world of birds. I am forever grateful to him. Opened my eyes up to the simple things in life! Finally, around 2015 we met up at A. W. Stanley park, where we both grew up. Been sad about his passing for years. He was a class act.

“ Please accept heartfelt condolences from a stranger. I did not know Donald, but I am one of the thousands of people his work has touched through the beautiful ProjectSNOWstorm maps that he helped create. His work will be a lasting testament to his passion for nature. I am so sorry for your loss. - Bonnie in Maryland.

“ I am very sorry for your loss. Don used to stop in at the Visitors Center regularly and he would talk about his plans for the A.W. Stanley Park and happenings in Downtown and the City. He had a brilliant mind and truly loved this city. He is gone way too soon.

“ I am saddened by the loss of Don and a piece of my life is gone with his passing. As we try to make sense of his death, I turn to the blessings of his life - his brilliance, his willingness to be of help, and the passions of his life. Don believed in the sanctity of the world. The continuity of his life will go for me in preserving to protect and save our natural resources.
