“ Uncle Frank is an extraordinary man whose life was emblematic of the "greatest generation". Frank is an American hero, in the truest sense of the word. We are fortunate to have two of Frank's paintings in our home. One, in the dining room, is of Worthington Ridge in Kensington not coincidentally with the home my mother grew up in as part of the winter's street scene. The other, a lonely salt marsh, proudly presents itself in our living room. These wonderful works will forever bear the honor of a man whom, though I did not know well enough, is a quiet inspiration for his devotion to family and country. From a thousand miles away, and many years passed, Frank Pulito will be remembered always. Our deepest sympathies to all who knew and loved Uncle Frank. Richard "Dick" Pulito
