“ When I left Texas for college, I was a real naive kid who had never really been away from home and did not see the intense homesickness that would follow when I went away to college. Later on, when my future wife took me home to meet her parents, there was this amazing home cooked meal and absolutely the best apple pie I had ever had - cooked by Helen Magson, of course. My future wife (then Helen's daughter Carol Magson) was beautiful, and her mom (Helen) made me feel so welcome that it was a home away from home. And Helen always made me feel welcome and that I was at home even for decades after. Her love for God, her incredible thoughtfulness and her warmth and kindness were an amazing and unforgettable gift to me forever.

“ My condolences to Uncle Jim and cousins Sue, Kathy, Carol, and Jim Jr. and your families over your loss. Auntie Helen was such a sweetheart, and I will always remember her with love, warmth, and affection. I have photos of family members distributed throughout the house, including, of course, pictures of Auntie Helen. These pictures serve as sad, yet happy, reminders every time I walk by them. There is an old song (from 1937) called “They Can’t Take That Away From Me.” The point of the song is that even when people part, though they are physically separated, memories cannot be taken away from them. So true.
