“ I offer my sympathy to the Wojsnarowicz family. When I was eighteen years old I left the nest of my family home in Berlin and rented a sweet 2 bedroom apartment on Dwight Street in New Britain. The three family house was a stone's throw from The East Side Restaurant. Victor, as I called him, was my very first landlord.

The rent there in the 1970's was $100 a month. Imagine! I loved the little pantry. I loved that I could do laundry down in the basement. I loved the huge gas stove in the kitchen that provided the heat for the entire apartment. I have never had such a wonderful stove since! What I loved the most about that apartment was the light pink bathroom with white trim and a white clawfoot tub. Above the tub was a skylight. I remember soaking in that tub as snowflakes landed on that skylight during a winter storm once.

Over the time I was there, a few years, I had roommates. My sister Wendy lived with me for a while and then when I got married and my husband Kenny and I lived there until we moved into a bigger apartment.

Victor seemed like a quiet man to me. But I always felt safe there. His family lived down on the first floor and I lived on the third floor and Victor always took good care of things that needed to be done.

I have the fondest memories of my young adulthood living there. And I think fondly of Victor, the Anne Maries and Gerry and my lovely first apartment.

My wife Simonne wish to extend our prayers for Vic and our sympathy to his family. Vic and I lost contact after my first wife Joan passed away but I thought of him often.
