“ Isiaha was kind from the first I met him. Though we stopped speaking we never left on a negative note. Moving on in life I always hoped he was doing well and boy was he trying. It wasn't till the end of last month that I found out what happened, and that hit me hard. Yes, we may have not been speaking for years but at this moment I wish I could have checked up instead of thinking it. Which taught me something, HE taught me to speak my mind more often or you'll miss that window. Best believe I will carry that lesson with me always and I thank him for being the one who made me realize it on a deeper level.

May you rest in peace, Isiaha

*PS. I hope you're coping well mama bear and family
